About the Summit Free Market

The Summit Free Market is a student-led, volunteer-run initiative that promotes the principles of reuse, sustainability, and community sharing. Since its inception in 2008, the Summit Free Market has helped more than 5,000 residents and kept over 175 tons of reusable materials out of the waste stream. The market is open to Summit residents, offering them an opportunity to bring gently used, yard-sale quality items they no longer need and, in turn, take whatever they wish at no cost.

- Browse & Take: Residents may browse the available items and take whatever they wish, free of charge.
- Sustainability: The event encourages the reuse of goods, reducing waste, and promoting a circular economy.

Important Information

To attend the Summit Free Market, residents must have a permit to access the Transfer Station. Permits are available for purchase online through the City of Summit Parking Services Agency.
